FARM SCIENCE REVIEW
HALL OF FAME

The Review Hall of Fame was established in 1990 to recognize outstanding individual contributions to the Farm Science Review.
Inductees are permanently recognized at both the Molly Caren Agricultural Center and in the Agricultural Administration Building on Ohio State University's main campus.
This year's inductees are:

Bill Zipf was the farm editor for the Columbus Dispatch during the Review's fledgling years. The late columnist was a strong supporter of the early Review, using his medium to generate public interest in the early activities.

Wilbur Gould is a retired professor of horticulture at Ohio State. He was a leader on the Review's Program and Policy Committee in the late 1960s and early 1970s. He was also instrumental in developing youth programs for the Review.

Shirley A. Brooks retired as administrative assistant to Ohio State's vice president for agricultural administration in 1988. Since 1963 she has handled many of the Review programs involving the College of Agriculture and coordinated visits by dignitaries to the Review. Since retirement, she continues helping develop the Molly Caren Center.

Marion Grimes of Greenville has demonstrated a unique level of exhibitor support for the Review since 1963. He has represented equipment dealers on several Review committees and provided special support to various exhibitor groups.